MACOMB NEWS IN BRIEF: Group seeks input on Lake Superior plan

November 6, 2001

The International Joint Commission, the U.S.-Canada agency that oversees the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909, will hold a public meeting Nov. 14 to discuss its review of the outflows from Lake Superior.

The commission wants input from people about possibly changing the outflow at Sault Ste. Marie, which can affect water levels, flows and the environment from Lake Superior all the way down to Lake Erie. There also is concern about coastal erosion on Lake Michigan. The outflow is regulated by a series of gates across St. Marys River.

The review would assess whether any changes are warranted to meet new needs. The Great Lakes have declined several inches during the past few years because of warmer winters and low snowfall totals around the Lake Superior basin.
